

THE DAILY BEE. Friday Morning, July 3.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The Chief Butler preferred a complaint yesterday against a man who was putting up a small wooden building on the corner of Tenth and Harney streets, for the purpose of running a fruit stand.

J. W. Honza and Richard O'Keefe settled amicably Wednesday the damage suit brought for ejectment, and the former has removed his boarding hotel and saloon to Thirteenth and Pacific streets.

The funeral of Johnnie, wife of Edward Guinane, who died Wednesday morning, took place at 8 o'clock yesterday from the residence 1115 Cass to St. Philomena's cathedral.

Summer Johnson, now of the Cheyenne Sun, is well known in Omaha as a former newspaper man. This evening the Cheyenne Leader speak of him: "Yesterday City Marshal Schnitzer lightly tapped Summer Johnson of the Sun, on the cheek with a steel screw driver, and this screw driver fell on the floor broken in pieces.

The fair committee has decided to tear down the amphitheater at the driving park, and enlarge it to the extent of one-third so that a full view of the entire course will be obtainable from the highest seats.

The council committee in whose hands have been placed the improvements of Hanscom park has just completed its task. A new platform has been erected, the culverts repaired and water pipes from the water works will be put in at an early date.

The opening of bids for the construction of the exposition building was again postponed yesterday. The plans and specifications have been constantly out of the office of Mendelssohn & Fisher, the architects, ever since they were ready for the contractors to figure upon.

A quiet little sensation found a climax Wednesday night in one of the apartments of a building between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, used by roomers.

Next Sunday at 7:30 p. m. will be held the festival of the choir of St. Barnabas church, which is composed of men and boys. Special music has been prepared, and the service will be fully choral.

Misgrace Hirschbach entertained her young friends at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Himesburgh, No. 320 North Twentieth street, Tuesday evening, from 7 to 11 o'clock, and every arrangement was made to secure the most perfect enjoyment.

PLEADING INSANITY. The Ballard Murder Case Still Running.

Introduction of Testimony by the Defendant--The State Rests Its Side of the Case.

When the district court convened at 9:30 o'clock yesterday District Attorney Estell announced that in the trial of Thomas Ballard the state had offered all the testimony it desired to and rested its case. This was unexpected to the defendant's attorneys and rather knocked them a little off of their base, because they had not prepared themselves to proceed immediately under such circumstances.

After parleying around for some time, however, the names of their witnesses were read over and two or three of them answered present. Attachments were issued for the balance and a bailiff started out to hunt them up. The court room was again filled with spectators.

Ballard had changed his apparel and came in this morning wearing a black suit of clothes. He sits just behind his attorneys and apparently takes very little interest in the proceedings, but a close observer can easily see that he notes carefully every word that is said.

His attorneys have adopted for their line of defense the plea of insanity, and the first witness called to testify was Joe White, a butcher. But he proved to be of very little force; knew absolutely nothing of his own personal knowledge except that he had seen Ballard on the day of the shooting.

Carl Sherman, a clerk for Kuhn & Co., druggists, was called as the second witness for defense. He knew Thomas Ballard before and up to January, 1883, he had often given the prisoner medicine, largely of a tonic and sedative nature, the kind that druggists called "bracers," and when Ballard came for these medicines he was badly broken up. These medicines were given to relieve him, between his periodical spasms.

Witness was asked by the attorney to state the mental condition of prisoner as observed by him, whether sound or unsound. Attorneys for the state objected, but the objection was overruled, and witness answered that he couldn't answer the question; Ballard was subject to periods of depression and moroseness; these generally came on when he would commence to sober up.

Cross examined by Estelle--Ballard was often on an spree and would frequently say he was going to swear off his brace up. When asking for "bracers" he always knew what he wanted. Ballard was capable of observing between right and wrong. Being drunk didn't seem to incapacitate him from doing business.

Andrew Frick testified in substance have resided in Omaha twenty years; have known Ballard since 1871; seen him during that time frequently; he was a man in the prime of his life, rather under the influence of liquor was wild and wraddles; when drinking he would be drunk four, five, six or seven weeks at a time, sometimes he wouldn't drink for three weeks or more. As to Ballard's sanity or insanity when under the influence of liquor the witness could not answer, but he wouldn't consider him a wholly insane man; think too that of late years his condition has been getting worse.

On cross examination the witness testified that in 1876 Ballard was in business with him. When sober, Ballard was always attentive to business and was capable of deciding between right and wrong. He had been employed as a night clerk and runner at the St. James hotel.

Moses Curtis was the next witness to testify. He knew Thomas Ballard, and had known him for 13 years; worked with and knew him very well; drank more or less all the time, and very frequently would be on a drunk two or three weeks at a time; when under the influence, if he met a man against whom he had a grudge he was always wanting to have trouble with him; he was drunk Ballard didn't know who was doing him wrong; he was always drinking, he was always drunk; he was always drunk with Ballard but had been on no "spree" with him of late; last summer Ballard used to go two and three months without drinking anything at all; witness had known of the prisoner being afflicted with a loathsome disease, which impaired both his physical and mental structure.

On cross examination the witness testified that Ballard had recovered from the disease mentioned and was one of the strongest men for his size in Omaha; Ballard was of sound mind when not drunk.

Joseph Freitman was called as the next witness. He is a butcher now but did some time ago run a meat market with three doors of the St. James hotel on Tenth street; was around the hotel about the 15th of March last. He knew Ballard, and Varpooten, used to see Ballard nearly every day. He always acted decent enough through the summer, but about a week before the shooting Varpooten he had been drinking; up to that time his character had been regular; just before the shooting, however, he had been drinking heavily and acted in a wild manner.

About a hour before the shooting witness heard Ballard say that he was going to make it hot for somebody. Didn't think he was then in his right senses; saw him in the saloon and he was drunk. It being noon and plaintiff not desiring to proceed with the cross-examination of then the court took a recess until 2 o'clock.

Afternoon Session. Joseph Freitman was re-called to the stand, when court convened at 2 o'clock, for cross examination. In referring to the expression used by prisoner on Sunday, March 15, the day of the murder, witness understood it to be, "I will make it hot for some of them;" prisoner had been drinking, and was very full, but could walk without staggering. Witness thought that the prisoner was drunker that day than he had been for a long time previously.

Kodirect examination--Witness didn't see the shooting take place. All he knew about it is what he heard others say. John Kaliski, a barber on Tenth street, was called, and in substance testified: Didn't know Tom Ballard very well, but did know Varpooten; used to see Ballard every day; saw him a week before the shooting; he was drunk, pretty drunk; he was wild when drunk; didn't see Ballard with anybody previous to the shooting. Saturday before the shooting Ballard was in my shop, and a small

WITH MIRTH AND MUSIC. The A. O. H. Society Will Celebrate the Fourth at Hascall's Park.

No better place can be selected by the pleasure seeker to spend a merry Fourth at Hascall's Park. The local divisions, through their committees, have completed arrangements for the affair, and everything promises a large attendance and an enjoyable celebration.

The Hibernians will assemble at their hall at 8 o'clock on the morning of the Fourth, and headed by their excellent band will march north on Thirteenth to Farnam, east on Douglas to Tenth, north on Tenth to Farnam, west on Douglas to Fifteenth, south on Fifteenth to Farnam, east on Farnam to Thirteenth, thence on Thirteenth to the park. Arriving at the park the day will be spent in listening to an oration by County Treasurer Rush, indulging in dancing and games, and partaking of a bountiful supply of refreshments.

An excellent string band will be on hand for those who wish to enjoy a merry dance, and the A. O. H. brass band will be getting ready to render some of their choice musical selections. Strict order will be maintained.

Spend the Fourth at Hascall's Park with the A. O. H. and you will not regret it. Increased street car facilities will be provided, conveying those who attend to the park gate. Tickets admitting gentlemen fifty cents; ladies free.
